MENDOCINO VALLEY SCENES — COUNTY BUILDINGS — MENDOCINO LOGGING AND COAST SCENES

VOL. XXIX. UKIAH, MENDOCINO CO., CAL.: FRIDAY, JUNE 30, 1905 NO. 52

CHARLES ADAMS APPREHENDED

Charles Adams alias Jones, for whom all the sheriffs in the state have been searching, has at last been captured at Olympia, Washington, just as he was getting on a Portland train. It will be remembered that Adams was wanted for the murder of Frank Drake at Hollowtree some months ago and Sheriff Smith has left no stone unturned to effect his capture, having flooded this and neighboring states with descriptions of him and the reward offered.

He had also secured a very excellent photograph of the murderer and had hundreds of them printed and mailed to every one in Washington, Oregon and California who was in the rogue catching business. It was this method that succeeded in running the other men connected with the crime to earth when it appeared that they had made good their escape.

Finley, the first one of the murderers captured, was sent to Folsom for life and was afterwards implicated in the attempted jail break and wounded and is now on trial for his life. Lambert, another of the gang was captured after what seemed a hopeless chase, being recognized from one of the circulars by the sheriff into whose custody he had fallen after being arrested for disturbing the peace.

Sheriff Smith had been in communication with the authorities at Olympia since Monday and had telegraphed such additional information as he had gained after the circulars had been issued and Tuesday afternoon left to secure the prisoner after he had satisfied himself that there was no doubt as to the identity of the man. Adams was six feet three and his unusual height made it remarkable that he should evade persuit so long but in the end proved his undoing.

He had been working in the woods and was probably waiting until the hunt should be given up and he could get a chance to go east. Adams still carried the 44-calibre revolver that he was known to have while in this county. Sheriff Smith will probably return with his prisoner today.

THE PRESIDENT SENDS HIS PHOTO

John A. Maddox, the postmaster at Miller is one of the proudest Republicans in the country and justly so as he lives in the Republican precinct in the county. It will be remembered that this precinct at the last election gave its entire vote—15—for Roosevelt. Mr. Maddox wrote the president of this fact and is now the owner of a splendid photograph of the president bearing the following inscription: "The President, with hearty thanks for your congratulations." Mr. Maddox has the photograph, the letter that accompanied it and the envelope framed in a neat glass frame and hung in a conspicuous place on the walls of the postoffice. The residents of Miller feel equally proud with Mr. Maddox of the photograph as of course they are the voters that made the unanimous vote possible. The distinction is one not often or easily gained by even a small precinct and they will no doubt keep the good work up.

Improving Her Property

The workmen are busy moving the old house in the lot owned by Mrs McGeorge on Perkins street. The old house will be moved to the eastern part of the lot and a pretty little dwelling will be built on the west side of the lot. The old house will be practically rebuilt and made into a modern structure. Mrs. McGeorge intends occupying one of the houses herself and the other will be rented. The improvments will be a great addition to the looks of the block.

CECILLE M. IS A WONDER

Col. Marks, Lewis Charlton and District Attorney Duncan went to Santa Rosa last Sunday to see their trotters make their final workout before starting on the California racing circuit. Mr. Duncan's three-year-old pacer, Schley B. negotiated his mile in 2:21¼. Charleton's Dumont S. being short of work was only asked to go a half mile which he did very handily in 1:8. Col. Marks' mare, Cecille M., worked a mile in 2:16 with apparent ease and her trainer stated she could have gone the mile in 2:14 if urged. This fast mile by Cecille M. puts her in a class by herself so far as Mendocino horses are concerned. She was on last Monday shipped to the Fresno meeting where a special race between high classed horses has been arranged and in which she is expected. Cecille M. is now taking the attention of Sonoma county horsemen and a mile in 2:10 is not beyond her reach, barring accidents.

J. M. Robinson brought in a copy of the Bullfrog Miner this week. It is a newsy paper and one of the first to be published in in this new goldfield.

THE FIREALARM BIDS REJECTED

At the special meeting of the board of town trustees called Monday night to settle the firealarm question all bids were rejected and Ukiah will forego this unnecessary expense for the present. The motion to reject the bids was made by Trustee Lucas and seconded by Trustee Charlton and was unanimously carried. Considerable time was afterwards spent in discussing proposed street improvements and it is possible that the money proposed to be expended for this purpose will be spent in putting some of the streets in a presentable condition.

Marcato Club Recital.

The recital of the Marcato club at York & Cleland's hall last Thursday night was a very creditable performance and the pupils of Mrs. E. B. Gibson showed themselves to be both well trained and talented. The hall was well filled and rounds of applause greeted each number on the program. The music rendered by Simpson's orchestra was very pleasing and left no doubt that they were the leading musical organization of the town. Mrs. Weldon sang Il Vatio in her best form and the song, Some Where, by Miss Jocie Ames was said to have been her best effort, and was well received. One of the best things on the program was a song by Mrs. Helen Carpenter which she had composed, the music being by Mrs. Gibson. Mrs. Carpenter is said to be quite a talented writer of songs for little ones and it is reported that she will soon publish a book of popular songs for children. Little Valentine Miller, the musical prodigy, also made his first public appearance in this city and his performance was little short of the marvelous. Accompanied by Professor Harlan he rendered a piece of his own composition that he had composed in a few minutes. It is said that there is a great future before him in the musical world and it is not improbable that some day Ukiah may be known as the birth place of one of the world's greatest musical geniuses.

On a Camping Trip.

Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Smith and Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Cleland left yesterday on a camping trip and expect to be gone a couple of weeks. Most of the time will be spent on the Garcia, and Bud and Monte state that they will devote a good portion of their time to gathering wild blackberries as they are the only thing on which it is open season and there is no bag limit.

FAMOUS INDIAN CASE IS TRIED

This suit brought by Captain Lewis and Captain Dick on behalf of the tribe against T. J. Weldon as administrator was on trial before Judge White Tuesday and Wednesday last. The facts are not disputed to any considerable extent. In 1881 the tribe of indians after which the Yokayo Rancho and Ukiah town and valley were named consisted of scattered remnants living in different rancherias about this valley, in dire poverty.

One of the chiefs or headmen, captains they call them when they render it into English, was Captain Lewis. He became inspired with an ardent desire to better the condition of his people by getting for them a permanent home of their own. First he talked of it in his own family circle, then to the group living at his own rancheria. Late in the winter or early in the spring of 1881 he sent runners to all of the tribe and language summoning them to a dance and council.

They met at his invitation, at the dance house, or "sweat house" on the "Huse Burke ranch" a few miles below town. There he made a long speech, "preached to us" as some of the indians express it. Judging from the fragments of his address that remain in the memories of his hearers and were repeated by witnesses after a passage of nearly a quarter of a century, it must have been a fine example of primitive eloquence.

"My friends, my people," he said, "we should get some land of our own to be home for our tribe for all time. We are treated by the white people as if we were slaves, as if we were dogs. We chop wood, we pick hops, and white man make the money from our hard work. If they get tired of having us on their ranches they can kick us off any time. Let us work hard this year, save all our money, meet again after hoppicking, put all our money together and buy a ranch for a home."

Other captains agreed with him and the whole tribe assented. They held other meetings through the summer to talk it over. Just after hoppicking the entire tribe met in a "brush house" on the river. Captain Lewis again spoke and wound up by spreading a blanket on the ground and throwing $75 into it to "preach" by act as well as word. Men, women and children threw their money into the blanket. When it was counted it lacked $1.25 of $800 and one indian threw in the $1.25.

The money was turned over to Lewis, who asked some of the young men to guard and watch him. Four chiefs: Captains Lewis, Bill, Charlie and Dick (Dick Ruddick) were chosen to attend to the business and were instructed by the tribe to get some white neighbors to assist and advise. Chas. H. Yates was requested to give his help and did so. From J. H. McPeak was purchased about 120 acres of land, including a hop field, for $4500. The land was deeded to Yates who paid over the cash raised by the indians, gave a mortgage for the balance and then deeded the land, subject to the mortgage, to the indians. The deed read "to Bill, Charlie, Lewis, Dick (all indians) and their tribe." All the witnesses connected with the transaction, both whites and indians, swore that it was the intention that the land should be owned by all the tribe as a tribe for a home for all time—not by any individuals. Having no money, no teams, almost no tools, the indians worked the land as best they could the first year. Carried hop poles out on their shoulders, all labored together without pay.

Their first hop crop sold for 40 cents a pound, and realized enough to pay off the mortgage. To have a little money for necessaries they borrowed about $400 from Yates and divided it among all the members of the tribe share and share alike. They sent for all the members of the tribe, even out of the county for some of their blood who had strayed away. Children of white pioneers, who through indian mothers were related to the tribe, were welcomed back to their mothers people.

They have built comfortable houses, have a school house, and a burying ground on the ranch. They have transacted outside business always through a white agent. Since getting out of debt they pay wages to all who do the farm work. Those who do no work get no money. Once, recently, they took from their agent $200 of the tribal fund or "company's money" as they term it, and divided it share and share alike among all the tribe.

For several years past F. C. Albertson has been their white agent, and has been paid a salary for his services. He sells their crops of hay and hops, collects and cares for the money. Whenever one of the tribe dies his coffin is purchased from the tribal funds. They have built a hop kiln and purchased all necessary farm machinery. All labor is now paid for in cash. The families build houses and live on the ranch, rent free. All go out to work where they please, and return to the ranch as home, when out of a job. Occasionally they lend money to Indians to help them along, even to those not belonging to their tribe. From the "company money" they once loaned quite a little sum to Chief Tack of the Hopland tribe, who faithfully repaid it. Within the last few years two of the four chiefs named in the deed have died. About two years ago a member of the tribe was murdered. The daughters of the two dead captains seem to be suspected by the other Indians of complicity in the crime, and this has led to dissensions. These daughters left the ranch, saying that they were driven away. But all the witnesses testifying say that they were not driven off and have the right to return and live on the place if they choose. The daughters of the dead captains, Charlie and Bill, sought the legal advice of the white man.

Mr. Weldon was appointed administrator of the estates of the deceased chieftains, and it is claimed that the tribe has no legal entity or existence, is not a corporation, or other body or association capable of holding real estate under our law; and that the land in law belonged to the four chiefs named in the deed, and therefore one quarter thereof and one quarter of the money now in Albertson's hands, (about $2600) belongs to the estate and heirs of each of the dead captains.

The two living chiefs, on behalf of their tribe, brought this suit in equity to have the land and money declared to be held in trust for the benefit of the tribe. Their testimony was directly against their own personal and individual interests and in favor of their tribe.

They said they owned no more interest in the land than any other member of the tribe, and that the dead chiefs never claimed to own any more in their lifetime. On the stand they appeared to be far above the average in natural intelligence, and experienced attorneys say they never saw men make better witnesses. Mr. Albertson testified that he always understood he was acting for the Indians as a whole tribe, and that the dead chiefs had told him that they held the land for the tribe as a whole, that it was owned in common. He said that when he rendered his annual statement and made settlement as agent, he sent word when he would be there and met the whole tribe assembled in council at their "round house" on the ranch, and explained and read his accounts to them all together, men, women and children.

By the way, as a matter that will interest some, it might be said that

HIDE BOUND MAURADERS

Last Friday night the boys at Edwards Bros. slaughter barns discovered a light in the barn and thinking the place was on fire made a rush for it to try to get out some of the hides. On entering the building they found that the light had disappeared and heard a man getting out in double quick order. They found a sack containing a large steer hide and a calf hide valued at about $15 which the gentleman had loaded up with the intention of taking. They also discovered a lantern which had been left in his hurry to avoid carrying any extra weight. The slaughter house has been raided several times in the past few years and a number of hides stolen, one enterprising thief backing his wagon right up to the door and taking a load as the tracks showed next morning.

Dolly Edwards states that he does not care for the hides but that the boys hate to have their slumbers disturbed in the middle of the night and that no objection would be raised if the party wanting hides would notify them beforehand so that the boys would not think the place on fire when they saw a strange light.

THE NEW COURT AFFIRMS CASES

Attorney T. L. Carothers received word this week that two of his cases had been affirmed by the appellate court. They were P. H. Idol v The San Francisco Construction company and Youree v Youree. The first was a suit that grew out of a claim for carrying laborers from this city to the camps of the construction company along the line of the road to Willits. Four hundred and forty-two laborers were carried at $1 a head and judgment was given for that amount. The case was tried in May, 1902, and the costs and interest now amout to over $600.

F. W. Youree v R. J. Youree was a suit for divorce which Frank Youree of Covelo had instituted against his wife who lives in Oklahoma. When the case came up for trial Mrs. Youree entered an affidavit that she was without means to carry on the case and asked that the court allow her sufficient sum for her expenses and maintenance during the trial. After hearing the motion the court made an order allowing her $500. The case was tried nearly three years ago and the judgment now amounts to about $600. The cases were tried before Superior Judge J. M. Mannon.

Woodsheds Are Woodsheds.

At the meeting of the town board last Monday night the Ukiah Mercantile company and F. W. Broback were ordered notified that the buildings which they had erected under permit from the board to be used as woodsheds would have to be used for that purpose only. It is understood that Mr. Broback is occupying his as an office and that the one belonging to the Mercantile company is being used as a warehouse. The intention of the board to enforce the building ordinance will be appreciated by the citizens. It is a move in the right direction.

Dan Burns in Town.

Col. D. M. Burns was up from his Hopland stock ranch Tuesday on a business visit. He is stopping at the ranch and superintending some extensive improvements that are being made. The ranch is one of the finest in the county and is well stocked with the finest horseflesh that money can buy. The Mendocino climate appears to be particularly adapted to breeding speedy horses and Mr. Burns is the first man to attempt anything of the kind in this section. His success will no doubt lead to the building up of a new industry in this county.

CROOK TRIES TO BREAK IN

It is evident that some city crooks have strayed into this neighborhood and have commenced operations. Tuesday night an attempt was made to burglarize the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Thomas in the western part of town. The burglar was operating with a "jimmy" and attempted force the front door. Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Wright were passing the place at the time and heard the door rattling and walked back to see what was the matter.

Their presence probably alarmed the burgular and he took advantage of the heavy shade about the house to make his escape. The door instead of being fastened with an ordinary lock had a heavy bolt and he was unable to break this off, otherwise he would have probably carried off the contents without being interrupted. Mr. and Mrs. Wright were attracted by the rattling of the door and the burgular who was evidently astonished that it did not yield was shaking it to see what kind of a fastening it had.

The only occupant of the house was Mr. Thomas' mother, Mr. Thomas and his wife having their beds in a tent in the yard. As the family had all retired early, the burgular, who had been watching the house nodoubt to see if there was anyone at home, had probably concluded that the family were away and for that reason was not very cautious about his work. In examining the door the next morning the marks of the instrument were found on the casing where the burgular had drove in the miniature crowbar. From the appearance of the door he had been working sometime before he was scared away.

Principal Resigns.

Prof. Wayne P. Smith has resigned his position as principal of the Mendocino high school and has accepted a professorship in the Los Angeles state normal. The professor has made a good record in the Mendocino high school and has succeeded in getting it into the accredited class. There are many in the county who will regret the loss of this talented educator.

UKIAHITES CAN CHOOSE

The local railroad has announced a very generous excursion rate from this city to any point on the line for the Fourth of July holiday. The fare will be for the round trip only what is charged one way ordinarily and the excursion rates will hold for five days—good going on any train on the 1st and returning on the 5th. Ukiahites will thus have their choice of what direction they desire to go to celebrate. They can go to Willits for $1.50 and participate in the festivities incident to an uptodate celebration or they can go to San Francisco and do the thing as it is done in a large city for $4.50.

A special train will be run to Willits leaving here at 8 a. m. and leaving Willits on the return at 5:30 p. m. Intermediate stations will be included, all going for one fare the round trip. Although Ukiah does not celebrate this year there should be no lack of joy for her citizens for if a railroad trip does not appeal to them they can go to Potter in buggies and have one of the finest times they ever enjoyed for a very small sum.

More Improvements

The repairs on the old house on the Smith street lot of C. H. Kent are nearly finished and the structure will look as good as new. The house has been thoroughly renvoated and raised and modern improvments added. It is understood that as soon as it is completed it will be occupied by Mr. Caesner and family, recently of Willits.

sel were preserved in it. It struck me that if I could see what occurred in the month of August, 1883, on board the Sea Unicorn I might settle the mystery of my father's fate. I tried last night to get at these logbooks, but was unable to open the door. Tonight I tried again and succeeded, but I find that the pages which deal with that month have been torn from the book. It was at that moment I found myself a prisoner in your hands."

"Is that all?" asked Hopkins.

"Yes, that is all." His eyes shifted as he said it.

"You have nothing else to tell us?"

He hesitated.

"No, there is nothing."

"You have not been here before last night?"

"No."

"Then how do you account for that?" cried Hopkins, as he held up the damning notebook, with the initials of our prisoner on the first leaf and the blood stain on the cover.

The wretched man collapsed. He sank his face in his hands and trembled all over.

"Where did you get it?" he groaned. "I did not know. I thought I had lost it at the hotel."

"That is enough," said Hopkins sternly. "Whatever else you have to say, you must say in court. You will walk down with me now to the police station. Well, Mr. Holmes, I am very much obliged to you and to your friend for coming down to help me. As it turns out, your presence was unnecessary, and I would have brought the case to this successful issue without you; but, none the less, I am grateful. Rooms have been reserved for you at the Brambletye hotel, so we can all walk down to the village together."

"Well, Watson, what do you think of it?" asked Holmes as we traveled back next morning.

"I can see that you are not satisfied."

"Oh, yes, my dear Watson; I am perfectly satisfied. At the same time, Stanley Hopkins' methods do not commend themselves to me. I am disappointed in Stanley Hopkins. I had hoped for better things from him. One should always look for a possible alternative and provide against it. It is the first rule of criminal investigation."

"What, then, is the alternative?"

"The line of investigation which I have myself been pursuing. It may give us nothing. I cannot tell. But at least I shall follow it to the end."

Several letters were waiting for Holmes at Baker street. He snatched one of them up, opened it and burst out into a triumphant chuckle of laughter.

"Excellent, Watson! The alternative develops. Have you telegraph forms? Just write a couple of messages for me: 'Sumner, shipping agent, Ratcliff highway. Send three men on to arrive 10 tomorrow morning. Basil.' That's my name in those parts. The other is: 'Inspector Stanley Hopkins, 46 Lord street, Brixton. Come breakfast tomorrow at 9:30. Important. Wire if unable to come. Sherlock Holmes.' There, Watson, this infernal case has haunted me for ten days. I hereby banish it completely from my presence. Tomorrow I trust that we shall hear the last of it forever."

Sharp at the hour named Inspector Stanley Hopkins appeared, and we sat down together to the excellent breakfast which Mrs. Hudson had prepared. The young detective was in high spirits at his success.

"You really think that your solution must be correct?" asked Holmes.

"I could not imagine a more complete case."

"It did not seem to me conclusive."

"You astonish me, Mr. Holmes. What more could one ask for?"

"Does your explanation cover every point?"

"Undoubtedly. I find that young Neligan arrived at the Brambletye hotel on the very day of the crime. He came on the pretense of playing golf. His room was on the ground floor, and he could get out when he liked. That very night he went down to Woodman's Lee, saw Peter Carey at the hut, quarreled with him and killed him with the harpoon. Then, horrified by what he had done, he fled out of the hut, dropping the notebook which he had brought with him in order to question Peter Carey about these different securities. You may have observed that some of them were marked with ticks and the others—the great majority—were not. Those which are ticked have been traced on the London market, but the others presumably were still in the possession of Carey, and young Neligan, according to his own account, was anxious to recover them in order to do the right thing by his father's creditors. After his flight he did not dare to approach the hut again for some time, but at last he forced himself to do so in order to obtain the information which he needed. Surely that is all simple and obvious?"

Holmes smiled and shook his head.

"It seems to me to have only one drawback, Hopkins, and that is that it is intrinsically impossible. Have you tried to drive a harpoon through a body? No? Tut, tut, my dear sir, you must really pay attention to these details. My friend Watson could tell you that I spent a whole morning in that exercise. It is no easy matter and requires a strong and practiced arm. But this blow was delivered with such violence that the head of the weapon sank deep into the wall. Do you imagine that this anaemic youth was capable of so frightful an assault? Is he the man who hobnobbed in rum and water with Black Peter in the dead of night? Was it his profile that was seen on the blind two nights before? No, no, Hopkins, it is another and more formidable person for whom we must seek."

The detective's face had grown longer and longer during Holmes' speech. His hopes and his ambitions were all crumbling about him. But he would not abandon his position without a struggle.

The third applicant was a man of remarkable appearance.

"You can't deny that Neligan was present that night, Mr. Holmes. The book will prove that. I fancy that I have evidence enough to satisfy a jury, even if you are able to pick a hole in it. Besides, Mr. Holmes, I have laid my hand upon my man. As to this terrible person of yours, where is he?"

"I rather fancy that he is on the stair," said Holmes serenely. "I think, Watson, that you would do well to put that revolver where you can reach it." He rose and laid a written paper upon a side table. "Now we are ready," said he.

There had been some talking in gruff voices outside, and now Mrs. Hudson opened the door to say that there were three men inquiring for Captain Basil.

"Show them in one by one," said Holmes.

The first who entered was a little ribston-pippin of a man, with ruddy cheeks and fluffy white side whiskers. Holmes had drawn a letter from his pocket.

"What name?" he asked.

"James Lancaster."

"I am sorry, Lancaster, but the berth is fall. Here is half a sovereign for your trouble. Just step into this room and wait there for a few minutes."

The second man was a long, dried up creature, with lank hair and sallow cheeks. His name was Hugh Pattins. He also received his dismissal, his half sovereign and the order to wait.

The third applicant was a man of remarkable appearance. A fierce bulldog face was framed in a tangle of hair and beard, and two bold dark eyes gleamed behind the cover of thick, tufted, overhung eyebrows. He saluted and stood sailor fashion, turning his cap round in his hands.

"Your name?" asked Holmes.

"Patrick Cairns."

"Harpooner?"

"Yes, sir; twenty-six voyages."

"Dundee, I suppose."

"Yes, sir."

"And ready to start with an exploring ship?"

"Yes, sir."

"What wages?"

"Eight pounds a month."

"Could you start at once?"

"As soon as I get my kit."

"Have you your papers?"

"Yes, sir." He took a sheaf of worn and greasy forms from his pocket. Holmes glanced over them and returned them.

"You are just the man I want," said he. "Here's the agreement on the side table. If you sign it the whole matter will be settled."

The seaman lurched across the room and took up the pen.

"Shall I sign here?" he asked, stooping over the table.

Holmes leaned over his shoulder and passed both hands over his neck.

"This will do," said he.

I heard a click of steel and a bellow like an enraged bull. The next instant Holmes and the seaman were rolling on the ground together. He was a man of such gigantic strength that even with the handcuffs Holmes had so deftly fastened upon his wrists he would have very quickly overpowered my friend had Hopkins and I not rushed to his rescue. Only when I pressed the cold muzzle of the revolver to his temple did he at last understand that resistance was vain. We lashed his ankles with cord and rose breathless from the struggle.

"I must really apologize, Hopkins," said Sherlock Holmes. "I fear that the scrambled eggs are cold. However, you will enjoy the rest of your breakfast all the better, will you not, for the thought that you have brought your case to a triumphant conclusion."

Stanley Hopkins was speechless with amazement.

"I don't know what to say, Mr. Holmes," he blurted out at last, with a very red face. "It seems to me that I have been making a fool of myself from the beginning. I understand now, what I should never have forgotten, that I am the pupil and you are the master. Even now I see what you have done, but I don't know how you did it or what it signifies."

"Well, well," said Holmes good humoredly. "We all learn by experience, and your lesson this time is that you should never lose sight of the alternative. You were so absorbed in young Neligan that you could not spare a thought to Patrick Cairns, the true murderer of Peter Carey."

The hoarse voice of the seaman broke in on our conversation.

"See here, mister," said he, "I make no complaint of being man handled in this fashion, but I would have you call things by their right names. You say I murdered Peter Carey; I say I killed Peter Carey, and there's all the difference. Maybe you don't believe what I say. Maybe you think I am just slinging you a yarn."

"Not at all," said Holmes. "Let us hear what you have to say."

"It's soon told, and, by the Lord, every word of it is truth. I knew Black Peter, and when he pulled out his knife I whipped a harpoon through him sharp, for I knew that it was him or me. That's how he died. You can call it murder. Anyhow, I'd as soon die with a rope round my neck as with Black Peter's knife in my heart."

"How came you there?" asked Holmes.

"I'll tell it you from the beginning. Just sit me up a little so as I can speak easy. It was in '83 that it happened—August of that year. Peter Carey was master of the Sea Unicorn, and I was spare harpooner. We were coming out of the ice pack on our way home, with head winds and a week's southerly gale, when we picked up a little craft that had been blown north. There was one man on her—a landsman. The crew had thought she would founder and had made for the Norwegian coast in a dingey. I guess they were all drowned. Well, we took him on board, this man, and he and the skipper had some long talks in the cabin. All the baggage we took off with him was one tin box. So far as I know, the man's name was never mentioned, and on the second night he disappeared as if he had never been. It was given out that he had either thrown himself overboard or fallen overboard in the heavy weather that we were having. Only one man knew what had happened to him, and that was me, for with my own eyes I saw the skipper tip up his heels and put him over the rail in the middle watch of a dark night two days before we sighted the Shetland lights.

"Well, I kept my knowledge to myself and waited to see what would come of it. When we got back to Scotland it was easily hushed up, and nobody asked any questions. A stranger died by accident, and it was nobody's business to inquire. Shortly after Peter Carey gave up the sea, and it was long years before I could find where he was. I guessed that he had done the deed for the sake of what was in that tin box and that he could afford now to pay me well for keeping my mouth shut.

"I found out where he was through a sailor man that had met him in London, and down I went to squeeze him. The first night he was reasonable enough and was ready to give me what would make me free of the sea for life. We were to fix it all two nights later. When I came I found him three parts drunk and in a vile temper. We sat down, and we drank, and we yarned about old times, but the more he drank the less I liked the look on his face. I spotted that harpoon upon the wall, and I thought I might need it before I was through. Then at last he broke out at me, spitting and cursing, with murder in his eyes and a great clasp knife in his hand. He had not time to get it from the sheath before I had the harpoon through him. Heavens,

In The Justice Court

The case of the people v D. S. Hemphill was tried in Judge Crockett's court yesterday morning going to the jury just before noon. After about thirty minutes deliberation the jury returned a verdict of not guilty and the prisoner was discharged. The charge was for defrauding a liveryman. It appears that Hemphill had rented a rig from H. A. Eldred of this city on the 17th day of March and drove to Eureka. Eldred was finally notified that his rig was there and that there was a bill of $35 due at the stable for it. He therefore sent a man for the team. The bill amounted to fifty days team hire at $2.50 a day. Hemphill stated that he had endeavored to settle the bill by paying part cash and paying the remainder of the amount offered as he earned it.

Our Correspondents

POTTER, June 27—Some of our items may not be as up-to-date as might be but one week is not very far removed. On the night of the 15th inst, the Quaker Medicine company closed their one week's show here and sale of medicine, after which a social dance was indulged in for a time. An interesting feature of last evenings show was a wood sawing contest by five ladies in our midst. The one who succeeded in making five cuts first won a prize. Mrs. Robt. Lounge won the prize and was presented with a nice lamp by the Dr. amid the laughter and applause of the audience. Mrs. Belle Jones, of this place, won the prize as popular lady. Marguerite Wattenburg was the popular baby. Several other prizes were also given. As to the curative qualities of the medicines sold we'll call another witness, but this much we know the far famed dentifrice sold could be well classed with the man we have read of in our school books, who sold the razors and they wouldn't shave, "made to sell," so was the dentifrice.

A notice has already been given for the doings of the Fourth here, which items will be given later.

The school in the Upper district closed Friday last for the vacation. Miss Blanche Barnett instructs the youths of this district.

Miss Hazel Brower, who teaches in the same school with Miss Philena A. Howe, near Petaluma, is here spending her vacation with parents.

Miss Amy R. Hopkins, who attends school at Berkeley, is also home for the summer vacation.

Miss Alice Howe is here for a two weeks vacation, we were informed. Miss Alice has a position in Santa Rosa as cashier in a store.

The cook house on Eel river, until recently managed by John Day, has been sold to the company and will in the future be managed by them.

The sudden heat has changed to extreme cold for this time of the year, so much so, that jack frost left a few light touches here and there on the night of the 25th inst.

Adieu until after the Fourth.

VERA.

Strike Artesian Water.

It is reported that quite a good flow of artesian water has been struck on the Tom Cox ranch. The gentlemen in charge will shoot the well this week and will thus open up the vein and insure a permanent flow. The success of this well will no doubt result in a number of the ranchers in this valley having wells bored.

Mrs. M. A. Ray and son and daughter of Philo were in town Saturday.

I was all run down from nervousness and overwork and had to resign my position and take a rest. I found that I was not gaining my strength and health as fast as I could wish, and as your Wine of Cardui was recommended as such a good medicine for the ills of our sex, I bought a bottle and began using it. I was satisfied with the results from the use of the first bottle, and took three more and then found I was restored to good health and strength and able to take up my work with renewed vigor. I consider it a fine tonic and excellent for worn-out, nervous condition, and am pleased to endorse it.

The Adventure of Black Peter

what a yell he gave! And his face gets between me and my sleep. I stood there, with his blood splashing round me, and I waited for a bit, but all was quiet, so I took heart once more. I looked round, and there was the tin box on the shelf. I had as much right to it as Peter Carey, anyhow, so I took it with me and left the hut. Like a fool, I left my baccy pouch upon the table.

"Now I'll tell you the queerest part of the whole story. I had hardly got outside the hut when I heard some one coming, and I hid among the bushes. A man came slinking along, went into the hut, gave a cry as if he had seen a ghost and legged it as hard as he could run until he was out of sight. Who he was or what he wanted is more than I can tell. For my part, I walked ten miles, got a train at Tunbridge Wells, and so reached London and no one the wiser.

"Well, when I came to examine the box I found there was no money in it and nothing but papers that I would not dare to sell. I had lost my hold on Black Peter and was stranded in London without a shilling. There was only my trade left. I saw these advertisements about harpooners and high wages, so I went to the shipping agents, and they sent me here. That's all I know, and I say again that if I killed Black Peter the law should give me thanks, for I saved them the price of a hempen rope."

"A very clear statement," said Holmes, rising and lighting his pipe. "I think, Hopkins, that you should lose no time in conveying your prisoner to a place of safety. This room is not well adapted for a cell, and Mr. Patrick Cairns occupies too large a proportion of our carpet."

"Mr. Holmes," said Hopkins, "I do not know how to express my gratitude. Even now I do not understand how you attained this result."

"Simply by having the good fortune to get the right clew from the beginning. It is very possible if I had known about this notebook it might have led away my thoughts, as it did yours. But all I heard pointed in the one direction. The amazing strength, the skill in the use of the harpoon, the rum and water, the sealskin tobacco pouch with the coarse tobacco—all these pointed to a seaman and one who had been a whaler. I was convinced that the initials 'P. C.' upon the pouch were a coincidence and not those of Peter Carey, since he seldom smoked and no pipe was found in his cabin. You remember that I asked whether whisky and brandy were in the cabin. You said they were. How many landsmen are there who would drink rum when they could get these other spirits? Yes, I was certain it was a seaman."

"And how did you find him?"

"My dear sir, the problem had become a very simple one. If it were a seaman it could only be a seaman who had been with him on the Sea Unicorn. So far as I could learn he had sailed in no other ship. I spent three days in wiring to Dundee, and at the end of that time I had ascertained the names of the crew of the Sea Unicorn in 1883. When I found Patrick Cairns among the harpooners my research was nearing its end. I argued that the man was probably in London and that he would desire to leave the country for a time. I therefore spent some days in the east end, devised an arctic expedition, put forth tempting terms for harpooners who would serve under Captain Basil—and behold the result!"

"Wonderful!" cried Hopkins. "Wonderful!"

"You must obtain the release of young Neligan as soon as possible," said Holmes. "I confess that I think you owe him some apology. The tin box must be returned to him; but, of course, the securities which Peter Carey has sold are lost forever. There's the cab, Hopkins, and you can remove your man. If you want me for the trial, my address and that of Watson will be somewhere in Norway. I'll send particulars later."

Merrick, of the exposition press bureau, who extended a first welcome to the delegates. Special trolley cars conveyed the party to the exposition grounds from the Union depot.

Appropriate exercises were held in the exposition auditorium in the afternoon as a part of the Oklahoma day program.

In the evening an informal reception was given in the New York building at which the visiting press associations were the guests of honor. Besides the National and Oklahoma Press associations there were delegates in attendance representing the Utah and California Press associations.

The National Editorial association delegates expect to remain in Portland for two days, but may decide to extend the stay.

MURDERED BY YAQUIS.

Ranchmen and Women Meet Death at Hands of Indians.

Tucson, Ariz., June 27.—At least twelve ranchers and several women and children have met death at the hands of a band of a hundred Yaqui Indians who have been raiding the country along the San Miguel river in the Ures district of Sonoro, and a party composed largely of American mining men, headed by Joseph Dewitt, has gone out from Pozo station to rescue the unfortunates who are in danger of being massacred by the Indians.

Dr. Frank J. Touissant who has just returned from Ures brought the news of the trouble which began last Friday. After several families had been murdered by the Indians, ranchers made a determined stand at Buenos Ayres ranch, where, aided by about thirty hands, they succeeded in repulsing the Indians, although Jesus Ortondo, proprietor of the place his brother Francisco, Luis Carranza, proprietor of an adjoining ranch and several other neighbors died from wounds received in the fight.

Dr. Touissant attended Carranza, who was brought into Lachumata, a mining town near where the fight took place. Besieged Mexicans took refuge in a ranch house and fought from the windows and roof. It is thought fully twenty Indians were killed although the number can only be estimated, as the savages carried off the dead and wounded when they retired.

The nearest armed forces is stationed at Ures, and when Dr. Touissant left Hermosillo they had been sent to the scene of the outrages. Five Yaquis taken just outside of Lachumaat and thought to have taken part in the massacres were immediately hanged.

MISS ROOSEVELT COMING.

She Will Be Entertained at Bohemia Grove on the Russian River.

Santa Rosa, June 28.—Secretary of War Taft and Miss Alice Roosevelt are to be entertained by President Arthur W. Foster of the California Northwestern railroad at Bohemia Grove, near Guernville. They are expected to arrive there about July 6, and elaborate preparations are being made for the reception of these distinguished visitors and the party which accompanies them. President Foster has given orders to rebuild the bridge crossing Russian river into Bohemia Grove, and to make it strong and safe, and men have been working diligently on the structure for some weeks past, putting on new caps and placing new ties.

A dispatch from Washington recently announced that the Taft party would visit the redwoods, but it was not known that the redwoods they would visit would be in the vicinity of Guernville. The party will make the trip in President Foster's private car, the Donahue, and are expected to take luncheon in the grove.

The Bohemian clubhouse at this place is one of the handsomest in in the interior of the state. It is situated on an eminence overlooking Russian river at one of the prettiest bends. A commanding view is obtained of the stream for more than a mile in either direction.

The Cause of Many Sudden Deaths.

There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because so deceptive. Many sudden deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, heart failure or apoplexy are often the result of kidney disease. If kidney trouble is allowed to advance the kidney-poisoned blood will attack the vital organs, causing catarrh of the bladder, or the kidneys themselves break down and waste away cell by cell.

Bladder troubles almost always result from a derangement of the kidneys and a cure is obtained quickest by a proper treatment of the kidneys. If you are feeling badly you can make no mistake by taking Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases.

Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and is sold by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful new discovery and a book that tells all about it, both sent free by mail. Address, Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.
